 and People. More Than Could be Told of in a Volume. Whose One Price is Within the Reach of All.

At 10 the village maidens appeared dressed in white, with red and blue sashes pinned across their breasts. The music, with small flags in their hats and protechnics. From Monroe, Copey, Trumbull, Seymour, Shelton, Birmingham and Botsford the symphonies of Fourth of July patriotism poured in, until it was estimated that 1500 were present.

A cavalcade of horsemen was formed, headed by a band, and the procession moved around the green, serenading the patriotic section on the way. Cannon roared, red fire was burned and rockets and canisters discharged, and a Fourth of July celebration was begun.

In the center of the green a stand had been erected, and on this the girls, the band and the speakers were seated.

Then Hon. D. N. Morgan, ex-mayor of Bridgeport, made a patriotic address which aroused the assembled crowd and was cheered to the echo. He was followed by more music and Hon. Robert L. Gilbert, of Birmingham, who landed the patriotism of the boys who rang the bell in spite of adverse circumstances.

More music, and Colonel D. L. Durand, of Birmingham, made an address.

"America" was sung by the big assembly and there were let-loues hundreds of rockets and candles. The crowd was invited to Wheeler's hall, where a feast prepared by the patriotic girls was served.

There was enough for the vast crowd and to spare. This was patriotism in its truest sense, and full liberty was given to the boys to ring the old church bell on the Fourth of July.—New York Times.
